Upon completion of the construction, the staff may be shown through the project and made aware of facilities and features installed. The tour may be conducted with the aid of the architect or consultant and/or contractor.

The staff may also choose to meet prior to the occupying of the new facilities to discuss regulations and conduct necessary for effective operation.

The Supervisor of Operations, or designate, will ensure that the architect, consultant, and/or contractor provide an orientation session so as to familiarize the maintenance staff with the mechanical and electrical functions of the new facilities.
